MERRY CHRISTMAS

AARP HONORS SAC AND FOX ELDER AT OKC CEREMONY; MARY SPOONER ELLIS AMONG HONOREES

Mary Ellis, Marjorie Lyons, and W. Lee Hammond

Sac and Fox member Mary Spooner Ellis was recognized at AARP Oklahoma's first Indian Elder Honors November 17th in Oklahoma City.

Mrs. Ellis has been an active member of the Sac and Fox Veterans Women's Auxiliary since its beginnings in the 1950's. In her earlier days she was one of the tribe's traditional cooks, and is possibly one of the longest active/serving elders (42 years).

Many family members and friends were on hand to show their love and respect for such a dedicated servant and leader for the Sac and Fox Nation. Mary's kindness and generosity will always be an inspiration for those who know this great lady.

Cherokee Ballard served as the Mistress of Ceremonies. A member of the Cherokee Nation, Ms. Ballard is spokesperson for the Oklahoma Medical Examiner's Office and a former award-winning television journalist. Ms. Ballard is also considered a friend of many in the Sac and Fox Nation. After the ceremony, Cherokee took time to join in a picture with Mary, family, and friends from the Sac and Fox Nation.

Fifty American Indian Elder Honorees were recognized from more than 30 tribes at the event which featured the Oklahoma Fancy Dancers and attended by several hundred people.

The Oklahoma Fancy Dancers entertained the audience with an assortment of different dances, and a large Buffet Dinner was served. The Oklahoma Fancy Dancers danced with several from the audience while the food was being served.

Among the honorees were authors, poets, educators, chiefs, and governors, elders who have kept their cultures alive by saving traditional dance and language, those who have fought for federal recognition of their tribes and nations and veterans - - - including the last surviving Native American from the Bataan Death March.

Native American Indian Heritage Month observed

By Stacy A. Ouellette
Public Affairs Specialist

District Employees gathered to observe Native American Indian Heritage Month at the Clifford Davis-Odell Horton Federal Building, Nov. 13.

Sandra Kaye Massey and Vera Grant, two members of the Sac and Fox Nation, provided a presentation on their tribal history and demonstration of Native American Indian games.

“By having these types of events, we are able to show our employees the diversity in our workforce,” said Jennifer Thompson, District Equal Employment Opportunity Office Chief.

“We have three confirmed employees of Native American Indian descent so it is important to recognize everyone’s contribution to the District,” she added.

District Archeologist Jimmy McNeil and District Tribal Liaison, Dr. Robert Dunn work regularly with the tribe and assisted Thompson in organizing the event.

During her presentation, Massey explained how the Sac and Fox culture is based upon spirituality and relationships. There are a variety of different relationships that tie those within the nation together.

“Vera and I are sisters within our tribe, yet are not in the conventional sense as you would assume,” Massey said.

“Due to our relationships we are considered sisters and I am a grandmother also to her grandchildren, although I’ve never physically had a daughter or son,” she added.

The Sauk and Fox nations were separate nations, who joined together in the 1700s. Today, they are known as the Sac and Fox. Their culture is based upon respect for the life within themselves, their families and communities and all creation.

The exhibit in the north lobby tells “The Story of the Twelve Boys.” When the Twelve Boys went out to find food and water they could find was nothing. Each boy elected to serve his people in the form of gifts to benefit his people.

“The Story of the Twelve Boys was produced by the Sac and Fox Nation in partnership with the Missouri Humanities Council as part of the nation ‘We the People’ initiative of the National Endowment for the Humanities,” Dunn said

Massey is enrolled with the Sac and Fox Nation and serves as its Historic Preservation Officer. She learned of her tribal history and tradition from her grandparents, Henry and Mamie Butler Scott, who served the tribe as Second Chief and Senior Woman of the Year, respectively.

Her mother is Henrietta Scott Massey, Cultural Resources Secretary, a Senior Woman of the Year, and Language Preservationist. Henrietta’s middle brother, Francis “Chibe” Scott, also served on the Cultural Resources Committee and as a language preservationist and was one of the two men who remembered The Story of the Twelve Boys presented in the Sac and Fox “Homelands” exhibit .

Grant is a Sac and Fox tribal member who grew up in Shawnee, Okla., where she spent much time with her grandmother, Jane Butler Foster, and grandfather, Grover Foster. Foster is the second man who remembered “The Story of the Twelve Boys.”

Vera’s presentation included examples of her ribbon work, crafted in Sac and Fox designs as taught to her by her grandmother. She also demonstrated the “Indian dice” game still popular among the Sac and Fox people today.

Vera currently works as a nurse at the Black Hawk Health Center, the tribal clinic where she has served the Sac and Fox Nation for 25 years.

Native American Indian Month is celebrated yearly in November. This year’s theme was Understanding Native American Heritage, Now and Then.

The exhibit will remain in the North Lobby until Nov. 30. For more information please contact Thompson at (901) 544-3501.

Veteran’s All - Gourd Dance

Saturday, November 14, 2009

Head Staff:

MC : Francis Grant

Head Gourd Dancer: Warren Hunter

Head Singer: J. Paul Wilson & Wildhorse

The event was sponsored by The Sac and Fox Nation Veterans.

Anita Stevens provided a stunning arrangement of pictures that reflected the remembrance of the Sac and Fox soldiers that lost their lives serving our country, and pictures of Sac and Fox soldiers serving our nation today.

The Veterans posted the colors and Francis Grant gave the prayer before the singing and dancing begun.

Raffle tickets were given out as you entered the building and many gifts were drawn during the dance. Chance tickets were also bought for different items and were drawn during the dance. The Veterans concession stand had several different food and drink items for those who danced up an appetite. Raffle tickets for a drawing that will take place at the Christmas Pow-Wow were also sold.

The All-Gourd Dance is a very poignant ceremony in remembrance of the lives lost during the different wars of the past and present. The dance is also a way of showing respect and honor to those in the armed forces today, and the Sac and Fox Nation Veterans.

The All-Gourd Dance depicts a coming together with family members and community to show respect and honor through songs and dance.

The singing and dancing was amazing, and the shawls that the women wore were absolutely beautiful. One of the mothers wore a shawl that depicted what division of the armed forces her son is serving, and a picture button of the soldier pinned to her shawl. Wow, the shawl definitely showed the honor, respect, and love this mother had for her son.

Young and old joined in the singing and dancing with such unity that gave respect and honor to those who have served this country. The unity reflected the stance the men and women took to protect their families and this great nation.

J. Paul Wilson & Wildhorse performed the music and singing for the dance with a lot of emotion reflecting the honor and respect for those who gave their life for such a great cause protecting our nation.

The Sac and Fox in Indian Territory

In November 1869 the Sac and Fox arrived in Indian Territory after a series of removals instigated by the American government. Homelands had been lost and stewardship over great spaces of land ended. The Sac and Fox would later return as a presence in the homelands but would never again live in them as a people; however, the spirit of the people lives on and changed the adversity of removal to the achievement of perseverance with tribal identity strong.

Roaming. According to his Autobiography, Black Hawk said the Sauk nation first came from the Montreal area of Canada, where his grandfather Nanamakee had been born. The Sauk and the Meskwaki lived beside the Saint Lawrence Seaway and entered what is now the United States along the eastern coast. For a time the Meskwaki (Algonquin) lived within the Iroquois Confederacy in a two mile by two mile area near the town currently known as Leicester, formerly known as Leister, in Livingston County, New York, in the vicinity of Mt. Morris. The area is now known as “Squakie Hill”.

Oral history also says the Sac and the Fox met the pilgrims who arrived at Plymouth Rock in Massachusetts in 1620.

Two related but separate tribes, the Sauk (the people of the yellow earth) and the Meskwaki (the people of the red earth) allied in 1734 after the Fox Wars and have thereafter been known as one tribe, the Sac and Fox, although both retain their individual tribal identities and customs. Sac and Fox historic presence includes the states of New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Michigan (where “Saginaw” means “home of the Sauk”), Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, and Oklahoma.

During Black Hawk’s time the Sac and Fox lived in Rock Island, Illinois. The tribe forced the Illini (now the Peoria) out of the area in 1769 and lived there for nearly a century. Black Hawk was born there and his description of the wide territorial range states that the Sac and Fox occupied or oversaw all the land from Portage Des Sioux in Missouri to Wisconsin.

President Thomas Jefferson felt that tribal use wasted so many hundreds of miles of land that could be used for agriculture and devised a plan to procure property. The trading posts set up and furnished items on credit to the tribes for their large hunts and for the winter with payment in furs. However, tribes never received full credit for the value of the furs and to settle their debt the trading posts encouraged them to sign away land.

In 1804 the Sac and Fox were one of the first tribes encountered by Meriwether Lewis and William Clark during their famous expedition, which began at Wood River, located at the confluence of the Mississippi and Missouri rivers.

1804 also marks the year that changed everything for the Sac and Fox.

What the original cause may have been differs by account, but Sac and Fox warriors killed four trappers by the Cuivre River in Missouri. The American government through the Superintendent of Indian Affairs, demanded that the Sac and Fox responsible be delivered to the agency in St. Louis, Missouri.

The Sac and Fox complied, sending a delegation with the responsible parties to “cover the blood”, a tribal custom that provided for the families of persons slain by the tribe. The tribal leaders fully expected the return of the warriors, and the delegation had no other authority than to escort and offer the provisions. They ended up ceding the lands by Rock Island by signing the Treaty of 1804.

Black Hawk protested this action as invalid, and his conviction led to Resistance.

Season’s Greetings!

The end of 2009 will be here soon. Hope you enjoy the holiday season with your family and friends.

For most of the past two years, I have been listening to and addressing the concerns, issues, and complaints from tribal citizens. These matters are confidential in nature and cannot be discussed. As an elected official, my concern is for long-term solutions to these issues, and my goal is to reinforce an infrastructure that will ensure we have a stable, thriving, sovereign government for our children, and our generations not yet born. For example, the latest source of revenue to our tribal members, per cap payments, is not an end in itself. True, we need to make full use of the opportunities provided by casinos. We also need to pursue other economic development opportunities. Protecting our status as a sovereign nation is an on-going situation and requires awareness and knowledge of laws and regulations passed at the federal, state, and city governments. Generating revenue that can be used to enhance tribal programs to benefit all tribal citizens, regardless of where we reside, could alleviate some of the issues raised by tribal citizens.

Housing. In April, I completed the Self-Monitoring Audit for our Housing Authority of the Sac and Fox Nation for FY2008. This is a tool used to enhance internal improvement of organization procedures. I will be conducting the Follow-up audit before the close of calendar year 2009. As a TDHE (tribally designated housing entity), HASFN staff is preparing for their own FY2009 audit, while also diligently working to close audit findings from the years 2001 – 2007.

For those individuals who are on the waiting lists for housing needs or repairs, please keep in mind that the Force Account Crew gets the houses ‘ready’ for move-in and also does the approved home repairs. Depending on the condition of the house, this work averages 3 months per house, usually longer. Per housing procedures, the priority of the waiting lists is dependent on several factors such as elders, veterans, need, etc. With the completion of the new maintenance building across the street from Housing on Harrison, HASFN plans to increase their work crews.

The SFN Police request for computer upgrades was not included in the approved IT portion of the RAP budget. While less expensive laptops are available, the cheaper computers are slower and are not capable of handling the software programs necessary in security work. The approved budget for the police department that was approved allows for the purchase of other necessary security equipment. SFN Police are committed to responding to the needs and protection of the citizens; the response may be slower than we would like. None of us want a situation within SFN jurisdiction that occurred in Seminole earlier this year. To address the drug situations within our SFN jurisdiction, and the related crimes, our police force is teaming with our neighboring tribes, Potawatomie, Absentee Shawnee, and Kickapoo, to re-establish the Tribal Drug Task Force to become more effective in addressing crimes in our housing complexes and also to share information.

Health. Pam Kushmaul is the Health Director for Black Hawk Health Center. Filling this key leadership position is key to addressing the issues and concerns being raised regarding BHHC services. True, more available dollars, and more effective use of available dollars will assist in better serving our BHHC patients. One immediate area Ms. Kushmaul addressed was the work-in/walk-in situation. Ms. Kushmaul and her staff are doing what they can to see all patients. Complaints and issues can be used to improve the current way of doing business, and myself and Ms. Kushmaul appreciate your input.

Assistant Secretary of Interior, Larry Echohawk. In October, the Pawnee Nation hosted a Listening Conference with Asst. Sec. Echohawk. With the hospitalization of Principal Chief Thurman, I participated on the panel discussion, “Oklahoma Water Rights”, along with David Gover (Native American Rights Fund), Robert Tippeconnie (Comanche Nation), and Susan Work (Hobbs, Straus). We spoke on the project we have actively pursued for the last 2 years regarding the Oklahoma Comprehensive Water Plan. My talking points are listed below.

- Thank you to the Pawnee Nation, under the leadership of President Howell, for hosting this historic event. Greetings and a hearty welcome to Asst. Sec. Echohawk. I also want to relay the deep regrets of the Sac and Fox Nation Principal Chief Thurman for not being able to attend today.
- The state of Oklahoma is in the process of updating its Comprehensive Water Plan, which is an analysis of OK water issues, resulting in a 50-year water plan to be voted on by the state legislature in 2011. The state process includes local and regional “input meetings”, giving the citizens of Oklahoma the opportunity to provide input to the water planning needs of Oklahoma. The OK Governor has empowered the state agency, the Oklahoma Water Resources Board, the authority to move this input forward to the state legislature as recommendation for policy.
- At NCAI in 2007, water issues at the national level were discussed via the Indian Land Working Group/ Indian Water Working Group. Oklahoma tribes gathered and determined that we needed to convene and become familiar with up-to-date tribal water rights issues.
- The Sac and Fox Nation hosted two “Oklahoma Tribal Water Rights Summits” for tribal leaders. Both summits were held in Shawnee and about 20 tribes were represented. Oklahoma is unique, not just because we have 38 recognized tribes, each with its own treaty and jurisdiction, but our state is split – the eastern half of the state has riparian water rights, and the western half of the state falls under the prior appropriation system. We felt it was important that we educate ourselves, to get on the same page, in order to be better prepared to protect our sovereign rights as - tribes.

- The outcome of those water summits was the concern that the Oklahoma Comprehensive Water Plan did not recognize the sovereign status of tribes, and more importantly, did not even address the tribal water rights retained by tribes. The consensus of the tribes represented at those water summits was that tribal members should be warned that the state may construe the sign-in attendance at the OWRB input meetings by tribal members participating in the input meetings, that their participation constituted the government-to-government dialogue required by our tribal sovereign status. It was also decided that tribes would send “letters of assertion” to the OK Governor, asserting tribal water rights within our tribal jurisdiction. The tribes also voiced a need for more education regarding tribal water rights.
 - The 1980 version of the OK Water Plan stated (I’m paraphrasing) that Indian reservations did not exist within the borders of OK; therefore there was no tribal water rights issue. The 1995 version of the water plan recognized the ‘need’ to resolve Indian water rights. We, the Indian tribes of OK, have made some progress!
 - Another result of the water summits was the appointment by the OWRB of Lindsey Robertson, Indian Law Faculty Director at the University of Oklahoma, as a liaison to facilitate tribal-state dialogue. Professor Robertson is not representing the state, nor is he conducting government-to-government dialogue. Professor Robertson is tasked with writing Chapter 7 of the OK Water Plan to serve as a resource for state legislature and policymakers. Professor Robertson’s working group hosted three educational Tribal Water Workshops, held in Shawnee hosted by Citizen Potawatomie, Catoosa hosted by Cherokee, and Lawton hosted by Comanche.
 - The themes of the Water Plan to-date are
 1. Balancing Supply and Demand
 2. Water Conservation
 3. Water Availability
 4. Surface-Ground Water Relationships
 5. Land Use Practices
 6. Water Sales and Transfers
 7. Inter-Governmental Water Resource Management (this is the chapter addressing sovereign tribal water rights)
 8. Inter-Agency Water Resource Management
 9. Stakeholder Involvement and Conflict Management
 10. Consideration of Local and Regional Issues in the State PlanIt is important that the Indian tribes be involved in the discussion of the OK water issues, and be aware of the water planning that is taking place. Yet, the state has made a conscious effort to not address tribes as sovereigns, and we are being excluded in this water planning effort.
 - Using myself as an example, I was considered a participant of the local input meetings. After the water summit, and because of my position as Second Chief, I relinquished my position as a participant of the OWRB input meetings but I am allowed to attend the meetings as an “anonymous observer” – not allowed to speak or participate. I continue to attend, and encourage other tribes to attend, to gain the information on the issues and concerns resulting in the OWRB water planning meetings. The next step in the state’s process is the Town Hall being planned for May 2010.
 - I request your attention on these points:
 1. Because the state’s process for the OK Water Plan is being restricted to 150 individuals who have participated in the Local and Regional Input Meetings to date, the Indian Nations are automatically eliminated from the Town Hall discussions where recommendations to the State Legislature will be generated. Please use your influence to give Indian Nations an opportunity to participate in the Town Hall and recommendation process for the OK Water Plan.
 2. With TAS (Treatment as a State), tribes are required to obtain agencies’ approval of their tribal water codes and quality standards. With the Inhofe “midnight rider”, no approvals are being provided. Please use your influence to lift this moratorium on tribal code and tribal ordinance approval.
 3. Because “regulated reparianism” is becoming the ‘norm’, giving government agencies more power and authority, please use your influence to protect our sovereign tribal right to regulate within our own jurisdiction.
 4. Please use your authority to provide funding to assist tribes with water planning, i.e., quantification. One option is to re-establish the BIA Office of Water, with proper staffing, funding and authority, as a professional and technical office for this crucial and central support of our Indian Nations.
 5. Please increase the BIA support of tribal allottees’ trust obligation. This land issue directly impacts the water rights concerns.
 6. Last, but not least, please use your influence to enforce the message of tribal sovereignty, to re-establish sound government-to-government relationships.
 - On behalf of the Sac and Fox Nation, I thank you for the opportunity to be among this distinguished group of leaders of our Indian Nations. I look forward to the rest of today, to tomorrow, and to the future of our Indian Nations under your leadership.

Water Rights. Why are water rights discussions important to the Sac and Fox Nation? There are several tribes in the US who have been, or are in the process of court proceedings to determine their tribes’ allocation of water resources on their tribal lands. The SFN needs to assert its tribal water rights, to implement its water code, its water management plan and environmental quality standards, as soon as possible, to minimize the state’s desire to allocate water to other interests. Court proceedings are extremely expensive and can take years (25+) to resolve.

Our own SFN Environmental staff is highly involved with enforcing the SFN tribal water rights. Daniel Wind has been extremely instrumental in coordinating the Tribal Water Workshops held during 2009.

The surface and ground water within our jurisdiction can also be an investment opportunity as storage projects and strategies develop to satisfy the demand for water in the western United States. We need to be proactive on the legislative, legal, and technical aspects of the water rights issue.

Wind. Highlights of the Wind Conference are:

- there are no "wind laws" like there are for water resources;
- a common method of acquiring land for the capture of wind resource is 'imminent domain', yet only established utility companies can utilize this method;
- most of SFN jurisdiction is in Level 1 category, meaning that the wind is 'negligible' regarding a potential wind resource,
- the Shawnee area is in Level 2 category, which is 'marginal' for potential wind resource;
- it takes about an acre of land to set up a residential wind turbine and capture wind as an energy source;
- the cost of using wind as an energy source is in the transmission system to deliver the electricity to the point of use;
- there are processes being set in place by private companies and individuals to capture and market "wind".

Why are discussions of 'wind' important to the Sac and Fox Nation? The federal government could identify a transmission system across the US similar to the interstate highway system. SFN is in a possible transmission path from the western part of the state that generates wind electricity and the eastern US, who are the end user of the electricity.

Unlike water, marketing wind is solely dependent on the land area.

(Usable water is dependent on upstream water users.) The sole beneficiary of any monetary gain (revenue) from marketing wind is the landowner who owns the land that has the wind turbine on it. Yet, neighboring landowners can feel the adverse effect of the wind turbine. Wyoming has set precedence in establishing cooperative 'landowners associations', allowing all landowners in the vicinity of the wind turbine(s) to benefit from the revenue generated by marketing wind. SFN members reside across the US, and should be aware of the wind markets that may be near their land.

The wind that crosses our SFN jurisdiction can also be an investment opportunity as transmission systems and strategies develop to satisfy the demand for electricity in the eastern United States. We need to be proactive on the legislative, legal, and technical aspects of the market for wind.

Unity of OK tribes. The SFN, along with other tribes in OK, can best leverage our sovereignty through some type of tribal consortium to address water rights and wind resources, while maintaining our tribal sovereignty and internal tribal autonomy. True, all 39 tribes will not agree on all issues, or support the same political views. But a unified group can carry a stronger voice to express the concerns and issues of tribal members. A unified group can also share information and resources. There are precedents set by other states which could be used by the Oklahoma tribes to establish some sort of tribal coalition, or consortium, such as the California Water Planning effort and the Western State Governors' Association.

Again, Season's Greetings for a happy and safe holiday season!!

Thank you, Cheryl
